Question: Describe how homes are decorated for Diwali and why it is called the festival of lights.

- Answer Key: Diwali is known as the festival of lights because lighting up homes is its central tradition. In the evening, people decorate their houses with traditional earthen lamps called diyas (or deeps) filled with oil and light them up. In addition, entrances are decorated with vibrant, colourful rangolis made from bright powders or flowers, and buildings are illuminated with strings of electric lights, creating a warm and dazzling spectacle.

Question: Why is stopping or reducing firecrackers during Diwali an important modern practice?

- Answer Key: While bursting crackers was popular in the past, many people have stopped or reduced this practice today. Firecrackers produce heavy smoke and toxic air pollution that harms human lungs, especially for children and the elderly. They also create loud noise that terrifies pets and wild animals. Stopping crackers makes Diwali safer, cleaner, and more peaceful for everyone.
