Long Answer — Chapter 01: Empty Pot

Category: Long Answer | Total: 50 Questions | Marks: 5 each

Question 1

- Question ID: CH01-LA-001
- Type: Long Answer
- Difficulty: Medium
- Bloom Level: Understanding
- Topic: Story Summary
- Marks: 5

Question: Write a summary of the story "Empty Pot" in your own words.

- Answer Key: Once upon a time in China, a boy named Ping loved plants and gardening. The old Emperor had no children, so he wanted to find a successor. He gave each child a seed and asked them to grow it and return after six months. Ping tried his best — he changed the soil, watered the seed regularly, and put it in the sun — but nothing grew. On the day of return, all other children had beautiful plants, but Ping came with an empty pot. The Emperor revealed that all seeds were boiled and could not grow. The children with plants had cheated. Ping was the only honest child, and the Emperor chose him as the next king. The story teaches us that honesty is the best policy.

Question 2

- Question ID: CH01-LA-002
- Type: Long Answer
- Difficulty: Medium
- Bloom Level: Understanding
- Topic: Character Analysis — Ping
- Marks: 5

Question: Describe the character of Ping. What qualities does he show in the story?

- Answer Key: Ping is a young boy from China who shows many admirable qualities in the story. First, he is hardworking — he took great care of his seed for six months, changing the soil, watering it regularly, and putting it in the sun and air. Second, he is honest — when his seed did not grow, he did not cheat by replacing it. Instead, he brought his empty pot to the Emperor. Third, he is brave — despite feeling embarrassed and disheartened, he went to the Royal Court with his empty pot. Fourth, he is humble — he replied to the Emperor timidly and apologised for disappointing him. These qualities made him worthy of becoming the next king.

Question 3

- Question ID: CH01-LA-003
- Type: Long Answer
- Difficulty: Medium
- Bloom Level: Understanding
- Topic: Character Analysis — Emperor
- Marks: 5

Question: Describe the Emperor's character. Why do you think he was a good ruler?

- Answer Key: The Emperor in the story is portrayed as old, wise, and thoughtful. He showed great wisdom by coming up with a clever plan to test the children's honesty using boiled seeds. He was caring about his kingdom's future, wanting to find a worthy successor who would rule honestly. He was fair in his judgement — he did not just choose any child but waited until he found the truly honest one. He was also just — he publicly called out the dishonest parents for teaching their children to lie. His ability to create such a clever test shows he was an excellent ruler who valued truth and integrity above all other qualities.

Question 4

- Question ID: CH01-LA-004
- Type: Long Answer
- Difficulty: Hard
- Bloom Level: Analyzing
- Topic: Emperor's Plan
- Marks: 5

Question: Explain why the Emperor's plan to give boiled seeds was clever. How did it help him find the right successor?

- Answer Key: The Emperor's plan was extremely clever for several reasons. First, boiled seeds cannot grow into plants — this is a scientific fact. So, anyone who came back with a flowering plant must have cheated by replacing the seed. Second, the test was simple — every child received the same seed, so there was no advantage given to anyone. Third, it tested the most important quality for a king — honesty. A dishonest king cannot be trusted by his people. Fourth, the test also revealed which parents taught good values. Only Ping's parents encouraged honesty. Finally, the plan was effective because it required no special knowledge — just basic integrity. The Emperor found exactly what he was looking for: an honest child worthy of ruling the kingdom.

Question 5

- Question ID: CH01-LA-005
- Type: Long Answer
- Difficulty: Hard
- Bloom Level: Evaluating
- Topic: Moral & Values
- Marks: 5

Question: The moral of the story is "Honesty is the best policy." Explain this moral using examples from the story and your own life.

- Answer Key: The moral "Honesty is the best policy" means that being truthful is always the right choice, even when it is difficult. In the story, Ping could have easily replaced the boiled seed with a fresh one, just like the other children did. But he chose to be honest and brought his empty pot to the Emperor. His honesty was rewarded — the Emperor chose him as the next king. The dishonest children, despite having beautiful plants, were caught and shamed. In our own lives, we may face situations where lying seems easier — like copying in a test or blaming someone else for our mistakes. But the truth always comes out eventually. Being honest builds trust, earns respect, and gives us peace of mind. Just like Ping, honest people are always valued and rewarded in the long run.

Question 6

- Question ID: CH01-LA-006
- Type: Long Answer
- Difficulty: Medium
- Bloom Level: Understanding
- Topic: Ping's Journey
- Marks: 5

Question: Describe Ping's feelings and actions from the time he got the seed until he was chosen as king.

- Answer Key: When Ping first received the royal seed, he was excited because he loved gardening. He took great care of the seed for six months — changing the soil, watering it daily, and keeping it in sunlight. When nothing grew, he felt worried and disappointed. On the D-Day, he was hesitant and scared to go to the Emperor with an empty pot. His parents gave him courage by advising him to be brave and honest. At the Royal Court, he was disheartened seeing other children with flowering plants. He stood quietly in the queue, feeling ashamed. When the Emperor asked about his empty pot, Ping replied timidly and apologised. Finally, when the Emperor revealed the truth about the boiled seeds and chose Ping as king, he must have felt surprised, relieved, and proud that his honesty was rewarded.

Question 7

- Question ID: CH01-LA-007
- Type: Long Answer
- Difficulty: Hard
- Bloom Level: Analyzing
- Topic: Comparison
- Marks: 5

Question: Compare Ping's parents with the other children's parents. Whose advice was better and why?

- Answer Key: Ping's parents and the other children's parents gave very different advice. Ping's parents told him to be brave and honest, saying "At least you worked hard and tried. That is what matters." They valued truth over success and taught Ping that effort and honesty matter more than results. On the other hand, the other parents helped their children cheat by replacing the boiled seeds with fresh ones. They taught their children that winning by any means is acceptable, even if it involves lying. Ping's parents' advice was clearly better because it led to a lasting reward — Ping became king. The other parents' dishonest approach led to public shame. Good values last forever, while lies are always caught eventually.

Question 8

- Question ID: CH01-LA-008
- Type: Long Answer
- Difficulty: Hard
- Bloom Level: Evaluating

- Topic: Personal Response
- Marks: 5

Question: If you were in Ping's place, what would you have done? Give reasons for your answer.

- Answer Key: If I were in Ping's place, I would do the same thing he did — bring the empty pot honestly to the Emperor. Although it would be very scary and embarrassing, I know that lying is never the right choice. First, the truth always comes out eventually, so cheating would only delay the consequences. Second, being honest gives you peace of mind — you don't have to worry about getting caught. Third, Ping's parents were right when they said that working hard and trying is what truly matters, not just the result. Fourth, if a ruler starts their reign with a lie, they cannot be trusted to lead honestly. Even though seeing everyone else with flowers would make me feel terrible, I would remember that my honesty is more valuable than any plant.

Question 9

- Difficulty: Medium
- Bloom Level: Understanding
- Topic: Sequence of Events
- Marks: 5

Question: Write the main events of the story in the correct order.

- Answer Key: The main events of the story in order are: (1) The Emperor of China had no children and was worried about finding a successor. (2) He came up with a plan and sent messengers to announce it throughout the empire. (3) On the announced date, he gave each child a seed and asked them to return after six months. (4) Ping took great care of his seed, but nothing grew from it. (5) On the D-Day, Ping was hesitant but his parents advised him to be brave and honest. (6) At the Royal Court, all children had flowering plants except Ping whose pot was empty. (7) The Emperor inspected every pot and asked Ping about his empty pot. (8) The Emperor revealed that all seeds were boiled and chose Ping as his successor for being honest.

Question 10

- Question ID: CH01-LA-010
- Type: Long Answer
- Difficulty: Hard
- Bloom Level: Analyzing
- Topic: Title Significance
- Marks: 5

Question: Why is the story called "Empty Pot"? Is it a good title? Explain.

- Answer Key: The story is called "Empty Pot" because Ping's empty pot is the central symbol of the entire story. The empty pot represents Ping's honesty — while all other children brought flowering plants by cheating, Ping's pot remained empty because the boiled seed could not grow. It is an excellent title because it immediately creates curiosity — readers wonder why a story about a king and a successor is named after an empty pot. The title is also symbolic — the "empty" pot is actually the fullest in meaning because it represents truth, integrity, and courage. The empty pot turned out to be the most valuable one at the Royal Court. The title teaches us that sometimes what seems like failure (an empty pot) can actually be the greatest success (honesty rewarded).

Question 11

- Question ID: CH01-LA-011

- Type: Long Answer
- Difficulty: Medium
- Bloom Level: Understanding
- Topic: Emperor's Revelation
- Marks: 5

Question: Describe what happened when the Emperor revealed the truth about the seeds. How do you think everyone reacted?

- Answer Key: When the Emperor revealed that all the royal seeds were boiled and could not grow, there must have been shock and shame in the Royal Court. The other children and their parents must have felt embarrassed and afraid because they had been caught lying. They realised that their beautiful plants only proved their dishonesty. The Emperor praised Ping for being honest and called him "worthy of becoming a king." He also publicly shamed the dishonest parents, saying they taught their children to lie. Ping must have felt relieved and proud — his empty pot, which had caused him so much worry, had actually won him the throne. The entire court learned an important lesson that day: honesty is always the best policy, and the truth always prevails.

Question 12

- Question ID: CH01-LA-012
- Type: Long Answer
- Difficulty: Hard
- Bloom Level: Evaluating
- Topic: Importance of Honesty
- Marks: 5

Question: Why is honesty an important quality for a king? Explain with reference to the story.

- Answer Key: Honesty is the most important quality for a king because a ruler must be trusted by his people. In the story, the Emperor specifically designed his test to find an honest child because he knew that a dishonest person cannot be a good king. A king who lies will make unfair laws, will not be trusted by his ministers, and will eventually lose his people's respect. Ping's honesty showed that he had the character needed to rule — he could be trusted to make fair decisions and tell the truth even when it was difficult. The other children who cheated showed they would take shortcuts, which is dangerous for a leader. The Emperor's wisdom in choosing honesty over other qualities like intelligence or strength shows that truthfulness is the foundation of all good leadership.

Question 13

- Question ID: CH01-LA-013
- Type: Long Answer
- Difficulty: Medium
- Bloom Level: Applying
- Topic: Real Life Connection
- Marks: 5

Question: Describe a situation from school or home where being honest is important. How can you apply the lesson from "Empty Pot"?

- Answer Key: One important situation where honesty matters is during examinations at school. Sometimes students may be tempted to copy from a friend or look at notes during a test. Like the children in the story who replaced their seeds, this is a form of cheating. Just as Ping chose to be honest about his empty pot, we should choose to write only what we truly know. Even if we score less marks, our honest effort is more valuable than copied answers. Another example is at home — if we break something by accident, we should tell the truth instead of hiding it or blaming someone else. Like Ping's parents said, "At least you worked hard and tried. That is what matters." Being honest builds trust with parents, teachers, and friends, and this trust is much more valuable than any short-term gain from lying.

Question: Explain the meanings of the following words and use each in a sentence: (a) successor, (b) heir, (c) passionate, (d) disheartened.

- Answer Key: (a) Successor means a person who takes over a job or title after another person. Sentence: The Emperor wanted to find a worthy successor to rule the kingdom. (b) Heir means a person with a legal right to receive title or property when the owner dies. Sentence: The prince was the heir to the throne. (c) Passionate means showing or having very strong feelings about something. Sentence: Ping was a passionate gardener who loved plants. (d) Disheartened means sad or disappointed. Sentence: Ping felt disheartened when he saw other children's flowering plants.

Question 15

- Type: Long Answer
- Difficulty: Hard
- Bloom Level: Creating
- Topic: Alternative Ending
- Marks: 5

Question: What would have happened if Ping had also replaced his seed like the other children? Write an alternative ending.

- Answer Key: If Ping had also replaced his seed with a fresh one, his pot would have had a beautiful flowering plant just like the others. When the Emperor came to inspect, he would have seen that every single child had a plant growing in their pot. The Emperor would have been deeply disappointed because his clever plan would have failed — he would not have found even one honest child in the entire kingdom. He might have felt sad and hopeless about the future of his kingdom. Without an honest successor, the kingdom could have been ruled by a dishonest person who would make unfair decisions. The Emperor might have had to think of another test or give up hope altogether. This shows how important Ping's honesty was — not just for himself, but for the entire kingdom's future.

Question 16

- Question ID: CH01-LA-016
- Type: Long Answer
- Difficulty: Medium
- Bloom Level: Understanding
- Topic: Ping's Bravery
- Marks: 5

Question: Explain how Ping showed bravery in the story. Was it easy for him to be brave?

- Answer Key: Ping showed bravery in several ways. First, when his seed did not grow, he still decided to go to the Emperor instead of staying home. This was brave because he knew he would be the only child without a plant. Second, he stood in the queue at the Royal Court even though he felt disheartened seeing other children's beautiful plants. Third, he answered the Emperor's questions honestly, admitting his failure instead of making excuses. It was definitely not easy for Ping to be brave. He was hesitant and scared. Seeing all the other children with plants must have made him feel terrible. But his parents' advice gave him the courage he needed. Ping's bravery was not about fighting or being strong — it was about having the courage to tell the truth when it was easier to lie. This kind of bravery is the hardest and the most admirable.

Question 17

- Question ID: CH01-LA-017
- Type: Long Answer
- Difficulty: Hard
- Bloom Level: Analyzing
- Topic: Theme Analysis
- Marks: 5

Question: The story has two main themes: honesty and courage. Explain how both themes are connected in the story.

- Answer Key: The two themes of honesty and courage are deeply connected in "Empty Pot." Being honest often requires great courage because telling the truth can be scary and difficult. Ping's story shows this perfectly — he had to be brave to be honest. When he saw his empty pot, the easy choice would have been to cheat. Being honest meant facing the Emperor with nothing to show for six months of work. This required tremendous courage. His parents understood this connection when they said, "Be brave and honest" — they put both qualities together because they knew Ping needed courage to be truthful. The story teaches us that honesty without courage is incomplete — you may know what is right but lack the strength to do it. Similarly, courage without honesty is misguided. True bravery is standing up for the truth, even when everyone around you is lying.

- Type: Long Answer
- Difficulty: Medium
- Bloom Level: Understanding
- Topic: D-Day Description
- Marks: 5

Question: Describe what happened at the Royal Court on the D-Day in detail.

- Answer Key: On the D-Day, many people brought their children to the Royal Court with their pots. Every child except Ping had a beautiful flowering plant in their pot. Ping felt disheartened and quietly took his place in the queue. When the Emperor arrived, he started inspecting every pot carefully, one by one. At last, he came up to Ping and saw the empty pot. He asked Ping why his pot was empty and whether he had not taken care of the seed. Ping replied timidly, explaining everything he had done — changing the soil, watering regularly, and keeping it in the sun. The Emperor then smiled, clapped Ping on the back, and revealed that all the seeds had been boiled. He announced that Ping was the only honest child and chose him as the next king. He also scolded the dishonest parents publicly.

Question 19

- Question ID: CH01-LA-019
- Type: Long Answer
- Difficulty: Hard
- Bloom Level: Evaluating
- Topic: Critical Thinking

- Marks: 5

Question: Do you think the Emperor was right to publicly shame the other parents? Give reasons for and against.

- Answer Key: Reasons for: The Emperor was right because the parents had set a terrible example by helping their children cheat. Public shaming sent a strong message to the entire kingdom that dishonesty would not be tolerated. It was important for the new king's reign to begin with a clear statement about values. The parents needed to understand the seriousness of teaching children to lie.

Reasons against: However, public shaming can be very harsh and humiliating. Some parents might not have known about the cheating — perhaps the children acted on their own. A private warning might have been more kind and still effective. Shaming in public can cause lasting embarrassment and may not actually change behaviour — it might just make people better at hiding their dishonesty.

Overall, while the Emperor's intention was good, there could have been a gentler way to teach the same lesson.

Question: Imagine you are Ping. Write a short letter to your parents after being chosen as the next king, thanking them for their advice.

- Answer Key: Dear Father and Mother,

I am writing to you with great joy and gratitude. Today, the Emperor chose me as the next king! I want to thank you from the bottom of my heart. When my pot was empty and I wanted to give up, you told me to be brave and honest. You said, "At least you worked hard and tried. That is what matters." Those words gave me the courage to go to the Royal Court with my empty pot. The Emperor revealed that all the seeds were boiled and could not grow. The other children had cheated, but because of your advice, I stayed honest. Without your guidance, I would never have had the courage to face the Emperor. You taught me the most important lesson — honesty is the best policy. I promise to rule the kingdom with the same honesty and truthfulness you taught me.

Question: Imagine you are Ping. Write a diary entry on the night before the D-Day, describing your feelings about taking the empty pot to the Emperor.

- Answer Key: Dear Diary,

Tomorrow is the D-Day and I am very worried. For six months, I have taken care of the royal seed with all my heart. I changed the soil, watered it every day, and kept it in the sun and air. But not a single leaf has grown. My pot is completely empty. I feel so disappointed and scared. What will the Emperor think when he sees my empty pot? Will he be angry with me? I know the other children must have beautiful plants. Everyone will laugh at me. Part of me wants to stay at home and not go at all. But my parents told me something that keeps ringing in my ears — "Be brave and honest. At least you worked hard and tried. That is what matters." They are right. I cannot lie. I will go tomorrow with my empty pot and tell the truth. Whatever happens, I know I did my best. I hope the Emperor will understand.

Question: Explain the chain of cause and effect in the story — how one event led to the next.

- Answer Key: The story follows a clear chain of cause and effect: (1) Cause: The Emperor had no children and was very old. Effect: He needed to find a successor. (2) Cause: He needed a worthy successor. Effect: He came up with a plan using seeds. (3) Cause: He gave boiled seeds to the children. Effect: The seeds could not grow. (4) Cause: Ping's seed didn't grow. Effect: He felt hesitant and scared. (5) Cause: His parents advised him to be honest. Effect: Ping went to the Emperor with his empty pot. (6) Cause: Other children replaced their seeds. Effect: They came with flowering plants. (7) Cause: The Emperor saw Ping's honest empty pot. Effect: He chose Ping as the next king. Each event logically leads to the next, creating a powerful story about honesty.

Question 23

- Question ID: CH01-LA-023
- Type: Long Answer
- Difficulty: Hard
- Bloom Level: Analyzing
- Topic: Symbolism
- Marks: 5

Question: What does the "empty pot" symbolise in the story? Why is it more valuable than the pots with flowers?

- Answer Key: The empty pot symbolises honesty, integrity, and truth. While the other children's flowering pots looked beautiful on the outside, they represented lies and dishonesty. The flowers were grown from stolen seeds, not from the Emperor's boiled seeds. Ping's empty pot, though it looked like a failure, was actually the most precious of all because it proved his truthful character. The pot was empty of flowers but full of meaning — it showed that Ping was hardworking (he tried for six months), honest (he didn't cheat), and brave (he faced the Emperor despite his fear). The story teaches us that appearances can be deceiving. The most beautiful-looking pot held the ugliest truth (dishonesty), while the emptiest pot held the most beautiful truth (honesty). This is why the empty pot was more valuable — it contained the one quality the Emperor was searching for.

- Type: Long Answer
- Difficulty: Medium

- Bloom Level: Understanding
- Topic: Role of Parents
- Marks: 5

Question: Discuss the role of parents in the story. How did different parents influence their children's behaviour?

- Answer Key: Parents played a crucial role in the story, influencing their children's behaviour in opposite ways. Ping's parents taught him to value honesty and hard work. They told him, "At least you worked hard and tried. That is what matters." They encouraged him to be brave and face the truth instead of running away or cheating. Their good advice led Ping to become king. On the other hand, the other children's parents helped them cheat by replacing the boiled seeds with fresh ones. The Emperor called them "dishonest parents who taught their children to lie." Their bad influence led to public shame and disgrace. The story shows that parents are the biggest influence on children. If parents teach good values, children grow up to be honest and brave like Ping. If parents encourage dishonesty, children learn to cheat and lie.

Question 25

- Question ID: CH01-LA-025
- Type: Long Answer
- Difficulty: Hard
- Bloom Level: Evaluating
- Topic: Modern Relevance
- Marks: 5

Question: Is the story "Empty Pot" still relevant today? How can its message be applied in modern times?

- Answer Key: Yes, the story "Empty Pot" is extremely relevant today. In modern times, we face many situations that test our honesty — cheating in exams, lying on social media, plagiarising homework, or hiding mistakes at work. The story's message applies directly to these situations. For example, in school, students who copy in exams may score high marks (like the flowering plants) but they haven't truly learned anything. Students who study honestly may score less but gain real knowledge (like Ping's empty pot). In the digital age, people often present fake images of their lives online, similar to the children with fake plants. The story reminds us that truth always comes out eventually. In businesses and governments, leaders who are honest earn lasting respect, while those who cheat eventually face consequences. The simple message — honesty is the best policy — is timeless and applies to every generation.

Question 26

- Question ID: CH01-LA-026
- Type: Long Answer
- Difficulty: Medium
- Bloom Level: Understanding
- Topic: Ping's Hardwork
- Marks: 5

Question: Describe all the efforts Ping made to grow the royal seed. Why did he fail despite his hard work?

- Answer Key: Ping put tremendous effort into growing the royal seed. Being a passionate gardener who loved plants, he used all his knowledge and skills. He took great care of the seed day and night for the entire six months. He changed the soil to make sure it was fertile and suitable. He watered the seed regularly, ensuring it had enough moisture. He put the pot out in the sun so the seed could get sunlight. He also gave it fresh air. Despite all these efforts, not a single leaf sprouted from the seed. Ping failed not because of any lack of effort or skill on his part, but because the seed itself was boiled. Boiled seeds are dead seeds — they cannot germinate or grow no matter how well they are cared for. This was the Emperor's deliberate plan to test the children's honesty.

- Answer Key: THE CHINA DAILY GAZETTE

HEADLINE: Emperor Chooses Honest Boy as Successor — Empty Pot Wins the Crown!

In a remarkable turn of events at the Royal Court yesterday, our wise Emperor selected a young boy named Ping as the next king of China. Ping, a passionate gardener, was the only child who brought an empty pot when all others displayed flowering plants. The Emperor revealed the secret that all royal seeds distributed six months ago had been boiled and could not grow. The children with plants had cheated by replacing their seeds. "At last I have found an honest boy worthy of becoming a king," declared the Emperor, praising Ping's truthfulness. The Emperor also expressed disappointment with the dishonest parents who helped their children lie. Young Ping credited his parents for teaching him to be brave and honest. The kingdom celebrates this unique selection that proves: Honesty truly is the best policy.

- Answer Key: The Royal Court was a grand sight on the D-Day. Many parents had brought their children, each carrying a pot with a plant. The court was filled with beautiful flowering plants of different colours, and the children stood proudly in a long queue. Everyone looked excited and hopeful. Among them, Ping stood quietly with his empty pot, looking embarrassed and sad. The Emperor arrived and began walking along the queue, carefully inspecting each pot one by one. He looked at the plants with a serious expression. The children smiled as he passed their pots. When the Emperor finally reached Ping, the atmosphere changed. He looked at the empty pot and asked Ping about it. After Ping's honest reply, the Emperor's face broke into a warm smile. He clapped Ping on the back and made his great announcement, shocking everyone in the court.

Question: Tell the story from the Emperor's point of view. What was he thinking and feeling throughout?

- Answer Key: As the old Emperor of China, I was deeply worried about my kingdom's future since I had no children to succeed me. After much thought, I devised a clever plan — I would give boiled seeds to all the children and see who was honest enough to admit the truth. When the D-Day arrived, I watched as children entered my court with beautiful flowering plants. My heart sank with each plant I saw — these children had all cheated. Where was my honest successor? I inspected pot after pot, finding nothing but proof of dishonesty. Then I saw a boy at the end of the queue, holding an empty pot with his head bowed. My heart filled with hope. I asked him about his pot, and he replied timidly, admitting he had tried his best but failed. I knew at that moment — this was my successor! I smiled and clapped him on the back. Finally, I had found one honest child in my entire kingdom. I announced the truth about the boiled seeds and chose Ping as king.

- Type: Long Answer
- Difficulty: Hard
- Bloom Level: Evaluating
- Topic: Leadership Qualities
- Marks: 5

Question: What qualities make a good leader? How does the story "Empty Pot" show that Ping had these qualities?

- Answer Key: A good leader needs several important qualities: honesty, courage, humility, hard work, and integrity. The story "Empty Pot" shows that Ping possessed all of these. Honesty: Ping did not replace the boiled seed and brought his empty pot truthfully. A good leader must always be truthful with the people. Courage: Despite his fear and embarrassment, Ping went to the Royal Court. A leader must have the courage to face difficult situations. Humility: Ping spoke timidly and apologised — he was not arrogant about his effort. A good leader is humble and approachable. Hard work: Ping worked tirelessly for six months trying to grow the seed. A leader must be willing to put in hard work. Integrity: Ping did the right thing even when no one was watching and even when it was easier to cheat. Integrity means doing what is right, not what is easy. These qualities made Ping the best choice to lead the kingdom.

Question: Imagine you are one of the children who cheated. Write about how you felt when the Emperor revealed the truth.

- Answer Key: I stood in the Royal Court holding my pot with a beautiful flowering plant, feeling proud and confident. When the Emperor started inspecting the pots, I smiled, thinking I would surely be chosen as the next king. Then I noticed a boy at the end with an empty pot. I felt sorry for him and thought he was foolish. But then, the Emperor smiled at that boy and announced that all the royal seeds had been boiled. My heart dropped. I felt my face turn red with shame. The Emperor said, "Shame on all you dishonest parents who taught their children to lie." I wanted the ground to swallow me up. I looked at my parents, who also hung their heads in shame. I realised that my beautiful plant meant nothing — it was proof of my dishonesty. I wished I had been brave like Ping and brought my empty pot. I learned that day that cheating never wins, and honesty, even when it is hard, is always the right choice.

Question 32

- Difficulty: Medium
- Bloom Level: Understanding
- Topic: Proverb Explanation
- Marks: 5

Question: "The wise indeed say: Honesty is the best policy." Explain this proverb in detail and give two examples.

- Answer Key: The proverb "Honesty is the best policy" means that being truthful is always the best approach in life, even when lying seems easier or more convenient. Wise people throughout history have understood that honesty builds trust, respect, and lasting relationships.

Example 1: In the story "Empty Pot," Ping was honest about his empty pot while other children lied. His honesty was rewarded with the crown, while the liars were caught and shamed. This shows that truth always wins in the end.

Example 2: In everyday life, if a student accidentally breaks a window at school, being honest about it might lead to a small punishment, but the teacher will respect the student's honesty. If the student lies and gets caught later, the punishment will be much worse, and the trust will be broken.

The proverb teaches us that lies are temporary solutions that create bigger problems, while honesty may be difficult initially but always leads to better outcomes.

Mother: I know, dear. But you worked very hard for six months, didn't you?

Ping: Yes, Mother. I changed the soil, watered it every day, and kept it in the sun. But still, not a single leaf came out.

Mother: Then you have nothing to be ashamed of, Ping. You tried your best.

Ping: But what about the other children? They will all have beautiful plants. Everyone will laugh at me.

Mother: Let them have their plants. What matters is that you are honest. Your father and I raised you to always tell the truth.

Ping: Should I really go with an empty pot? What will the Emperor think?

Mother: Be brave and honest, Ping. At least you worked hard and tried. That is what truly matters. The Emperor is a wise man — he will understand.

Ping: You are right, Mother. I will go tomorrow and tell the truth. Thank you for giving me courage.

Question 34

- Question ID: CH01-LA-034
- Type: Long Answer
- Difficulty: Medium
- Bloom Level: Understanding

- Topic: Science Connection
- Marks: 5

Question: Why can boiled seeds not grow into plants? Explain the science behind it and its role in the story.

- Answer Key: Seeds contain tiny living parts called embryos that have the potential to grow into new plants. When seeds are boiled, the extreme heat kills these living cells inside the seed. The proteins in the seed get damaged, and the enzymes needed for germination are destroyed. Once the embryo is dead, the seed can never germinate, no matter how much care is given — water, sunlight, and good soil cannot bring dead cells back to life.

In the story, the Emperor used this scientific fact cleverly. He knew that boiled seeds would never grow, so any child returning with a plant must have cheated. This made the test foolproof — there was no chance that an honest child could have a growing plant. Ping's gardening skills were excellent, but they were useless against dead seeds. The Emperor's plan worked perfectly because it relied on this unchangeable fact of nature to separate the honest children from the dishonest ones.

- Difficulty: Hard
- Bloom Level: Evaluating
- Topic: Cultural Significance
- Marks: 5

Question: This is a Chinese folktale. Why do you think such stories are important? What do folktales teach us?

- Answer Key: Folktales like "Empty Pot" are extremely important because they carry the wisdom of ancient cultures and teach timeless values to each new generation. First, folktales teach moral lessons in an engaging way — through characters and events that children can relate to. The story of Ping teaches honesty without lecturing, making the lesson memorable. Second, folktales preserve cultural heritage — this Chinese folktale shows what values were important in ancient Chinese society. Third, folktales help children develop critical thinking — readers must understand why Ping was rewarded and why cheating was wrong. Fourth, folktales are universal — the message of honesty applies to all cultures, countries, and time periods. Even today, centuries after this story was first told, it remains relevant. Fifth, folktales bring families together — parents tell these stories to children, creating bonds and shared values. Stories like "Empty Pot" are treasures of human civilization that keep important values alive.

- Topic: Poster Design
- Marks: 5

Question: Design a poster promoting the message "Honesty is the Best Policy" using ideas from the story. Describe what the poster would look like and what text it would contain.

- Answer Key: Poster Title: "HONESTY IS THE BEST POLICY"

Text on the poster:

Top: "Be Like Ping — Choose Honesty!" (in bold, golden letters)

Middle: An image of an empty pot with the words: "An empty pot filled with truth is worth more than a thousand pots filled with lies."

Bottom: "The truth may be difficult, but it is always rewarded."

Corner: "From the Chinese folktale 'Empty Pot' — Class IV English"

The poster would use bright colours — gold for honesty, green for Ping's gardening, and red for the royal court. The empty pot would be highlighted as the hero of the story.

Question 37

- Question ID: CH01-LA-037
- Type: Long Answer
- Difficulty: Hard
- Bloom Level: Analyzing
- Topic: Irony in the Story
- Marks: 5

Question: Explain the irony in the story "Empty Pot." How is the outcome the opposite of what everyone expected?

- Answer Key: The story is full of irony — situations where the outcome is the opposite of what was expected. First, the biggest irony is that the child with no plant won the contest. Everyone expected the child with the biggest, most beautiful plant to become king, but it was the child with nothing who was chosen. Second, the empty pot was seen as a failure by everyone, but it turned out to be the most valuable pot. Third, the children who "succeeded" in growing plants actually failed the real test, while Ping who "failed" at growing a plant actually succeeded. Fourth, the parents who helped their children were actually harming them, while Ping's parents who seemed to offer no practical help gave him the greatest gift — good values. Fifth, the Emperor's smile was unexpected — Ping expected anger but received praise. These ironies make the story powerful because they show that true value lies not in appearances but in character. What looks like failure can be the greatest success.

Question 38

- Question ID: CH01-LA-038
- Type: Long Answer
- Difficulty: Medium
- Bloom Level: Understanding
- Topic: Word Meanings in Context
- Marks: 5

Question: Explain the following phrases as used in the story: (a) "worthy successor," (b) "passionate gardener," (c) "the D-Day arrived," (d) "clapped him on the back."

- Answer Key: (a) "Worthy successor" — This means a person who deserves to take over the Emperor's role as king. The Emperor wanted someone with good character and values, not just any child. Ping proved himself worthy through his honesty.

(b) "Passionate gardener" — This means someone who loves gardening with great enthusiasm and dedication. Ping's passion for plants made him work extra hard on the seed, making his failure despite effort even more meaningful.

(c) "The D-Day arrived" — D-Day means the important day when something significant is planned. Here, it refers to the day when children had to bring their pots back to the Emperor after six months. It was a turning point in the story.

(d) "Clapped him on the back" — This is a friendly gesture of congratulation and approval. The Emperor patted Ping's back to show he was pleased and proud of Ping's honesty. It showed warmth and acceptance.

Question 39

- Difficulty: Hard
- Bloom Level: Creating
- Topic: Speech Writing
- Marks: 5

Question: Imagine you are the Emperor. Write a short speech you would give to the people after choosing Ping as king.

- Answer Key: My dear citizens of China,

Today is a historic day for our great kingdom. I stand before you as your old Emperor who has spent years searching for a worthy successor. Many months ago, I gave every child in this kingdom a seed and asked them to grow it. What you did not know is that every seed was boiled — no seed could possibly grow.

Yet today, I see pots full of beautiful flowers. This means that nearly every child, guided by their parents, chose to lie and cheat. Only one boy — young Ping — came before me with an empty pot and the truth. He told me he tried his best but the seed did not grow. He did not know why, but he was honest about his failure.

Citizens, a kingdom is built on trust. A king who lies cannot govern justly. I have chosen Ping as your next king because he has the most precious quality a ruler can have — honesty. Remember this day and the lesson it teaches: Honesty is the best policy. Let us all learn from this brave young boy.

Long live King Ping!

Question 40

- Question ID: CH01-LA-040
- Type: Long Answer
- Difficulty: Medium
- Bloom Level: Understanding
- Topic: Feelings Analysis
- Marks: 5

Question: Describe the different feelings Ping experienced throughout the story.

- Answer Key: Ping went through many emotions throughout the story. Joy and excitement: When he first received the seed, he was happy because he loved gardening and saw it as an opportunity. Hope and dedication: For six months, he worked with hope, believing his care would make the seed grow. Disappointment: When nothing grew despite his efforts, he felt deeply disappointed. Worry and fear: As the D-Day approached, he became anxious about facing the Emperor with an empty pot. Hesitation: He was unsure whether to go to the Royal Court at all. Encouragement: His parents' words gave him some courage and comfort. Embarrassment and shame: At the Royal Court, seeing other children's plants made him feel disheartened and ashamed. Nervousness: When speaking to the Emperor, he was timid and scared. Surprise and relief: When the Emperor smiled and chose him, Ping must have felt shocked but incredibly relieved. Pride and joy: Finally being chosen as king filled him with happiness.

Question 41

- Question ID: CH01-LA-041
- Type: Long Answer
- Difficulty: Hard
- Bloom Level: Evaluating
- Topic: Good vs Evil
- Marks: 5

Question: In the story, who represents 'good' and who represents 'evil'? Is it fair to call the other children 'evil'? Discuss.

- Answer Key: In the story, Ping and his parents represent 'good' — they stand for honesty, hard work, and integrity. The other children and their parents represent dishonesty, which could be seen as 'evil.' However, calling the other children 'evil' may be too strong. They were young children who followed their parents' guidance. The real blame lies with the parents who taught them to cheat. The children may not have fully understood the difference between right and wrong. They saw a problem (the seed didn't grow) and their parents offered a solution (replace it), which seemed logical to a young mind. Also, 'evil' suggests deliberate cruelty, but cheating in this case was more about fear of failure and wanting to please the Emperor. The story's strength is that it doesn't demonise the other children — it focuses on praising Ping's honesty rather than condemning others. The lesson is positive: choose honesty because it leads to good outcomes, not just because dishonesty is punished.

Question 42

- Question ID: CH01-LA-042
- Type: Long Answer
- Difficulty: Medium
- Bloom Level: Understanding
- Topic: Setting Analysis
- Marks: 5

Question: Describe the setting of the story. How does the Chinese setting add to the story?

- Answer Key: The story is set in ancient China, in a kingdom ruled by an old Emperor. The main locations are Ping's home (where he cares for the seed), and the Royal Court (where the children bring their pots). The Chinese setting adds richness to the story in several ways. First, China has a long history of emperors and kingdoms, making the succession plot believable and exciting. Second, Chinese culture deeply values wisdom, hard work, and moral virtue — these values are central to the story. Third, the tradition of folktales is strong in Chinese culture, and this story fits perfectly into that tradition of teaching morals through stories. The Royal Court provides a grand, formal setting that raises the stakes — Ping's act of honesty becomes more impressive because it happens in front of the Emperor and the entire court. The setting also makes the story feel timeless — it could have happened centuries ago, giving it a magical, fairy-tale quality that makes the lesson even more memorable.

Question 43

- Question ID: CH01-LA-043
- Type: Long Answer
- Difficulty: Hard
- Bloom Level: Analyzing
- Topic: Story Structure
- Marks: 5

Question: Explain the beginning, middle, and end of the story "Empty Pot." How does each part contribute to the overall message?

- Answer Key: Beginning: The story opens by introducing Ping, who loves gardening, and the Emperor's problem — he has no children and needs a successor. The Emperor devises a clever plan with boiled seeds. This part sets up the conflict and creates curiosity.

Middle: Ping receives the seed and works hard for six months, but nothing grows. On the D-Day, he is hesitant but his parents encourage him. At the Royal Court, he sees everyone else has flowering plants and feels disheartened. The Emperor inspects each pot and reaches Ping's empty one. This part builds tension and shows Ping's internal struggle between fear and honesty.

End: The Emperor reveals that all seeds were boiled, praises Ping's honesty, and chooses him as the next king. The dishonest parents are shamed. This part delivers the resolution and the moral.

Each part is essential: the beginning creates the test, the middle tests Ping's character, and the end rewards his honesty. Together, they powerfully convey the message that honesty is the best policy.

Question 44

- Question ID: CH01-LA-044
- Type: Long Answer
- Difficulty: Medium
- Bloom Level: Applying
- Topic: Creative Continuation
- Marks: 5

Question: What kind of king do you think Ping would become? Write about his first day as king.

- Answer Key: Based on his character in the story, Ping would become an honest, fair, and wise king. On his first day as king, he would probably feel nervous but determined. He would gather his ministers and announce that his kingdom would be built on honesty and trust — no lying or cheating would be tolerated. He might create a new law that rewards honesty and punishes dishonesty. Being a passionate gardener, he might order beautiful gardens to be planted throughout the kingdom for everyone to enjoy. He would be a kind and humble ruler, listening to his people's problems and treating everyone fairly. He would remember the lesson of the empty pot and never forget how honesty brought him to the throne. Most importantly, he would be a king that his people could trust — because they would know that a ruler who chose truth over an easy lie would always make decisions for their benefit, not his own.

Question 45

- Question ID: CH01-LA-045
- Type: Long Answer
- Difficulty: Hard
- Bloom Level: Evaluating
- Topic: Debate
- Marks: 5

Question: "Success is more important than honesty." Do you agree or disagree? Use the story to support your answer.

- Answer Key: I strongly disagree with this statement, and the story "Empty Pot" perfectly illustrates why. In the story, the other children achieved "success" — they had beautiful flowering plants — but this success was built on lies. Their success was temporary and meaningless because it was dishonest. Ping appeared to have "failed" — his pot was empty — but his honest failure was more valuable than any dishonest success. True success is not about winning at any cost. If you lie to succeed, you live in constant fear of being caught. The other children's "success" ended in public shame. Meanwhile, Ping's honest "failure" led to the greatest success of all — becoming king. The story teaches us that honesty IS success. When you are honest, people trust you, respect you, and want to follow you. A success built on lies is like a house built on sand — it will collapse eventually. Honesty is the foundation of lasting success.

Question 46

- Question ID: CH01-LA-046
- Type: Long Answer
- Difficulty: Medium
- Bloom Level: Understanding
- Topic: Comparative Analysis
- Marks: 5

Question: Compare the seeds given by the Emperor with normal seeds. What was special about the Emperor's seeds?

- Answer Key: Normal seeds are living things that contain a tiny embryo with the potential to grow into a new plant. When given proper conditions — water, sunlight, soil, and air — normal seeds germinate, sprout, and grow into plants with leaves, flowers, and fruits. The Emperor's seeds, however, were special because they had been boiled. Boiling killed the living embryo inside each seed, making them dead seeds that could never germinate or grow, no matter how much care they received. From the outside, boiled seeds look exactly like normal seeds — you cannot tell the difference by just looking at them. This is what made the Emperor's plan so clever. The children received what appeared to be normal seeds, and most assumed they should grow. Only when they failed to grow would an honest child admit the truth, while dishonest ones would replace them. The Emperor used this scientific fact as a moral test — a brilliant combination of science and wisdom.

- Topic: Story Expansion
- Marks: 5

Question: Write a sequel to "Empty Pot" — what happened in the kingdom after Ping became king?

- Answer Key: After Ping was crowned king, the kingdom of China entered a golden age of honesty and fairness. King Ping's first act was to plant a beautiful royal garden in the palace, keeping alive his love for plants and gardening. He placed an empty pot at the entrance of the Royal Court as a reminder that honesty is the most important value. He created a new tradition — every year, on the anniversary of his selection, he would invite children to the palace and tell them the story of the Empty Pot, reminding them to always be truthful. King Ping ruled wisely and fairly. He listened to his people, never lied to them, and always kept his promises. When difficult decisions arose, he remembered his parents' words: "Be brave and honest." His kingdom prospered because merchants and traders trusted a king who valued honesty. Other kingdoms sought alliances with him because they knew his word could be trusted. Years later, when King Ping grew old, he used the same test of boiled seeds to find his own successor, continuing the tradition of choosing honest leaders.

Question 48

- Question ID: CH01-LA-048
- Type: Long Answer
- Difficulty: Medium
- Bloom Level: Applying
- Topic: Interview Questions
- Marks: 5

Question: If you could interview Ping after he became king, what five questions would you ask him? Write the questions and his possible answers.

- Answer Key: Q1: How did you feel when the Emperor chose you as king?

A1: I was shocked and overjoyed! I had gone to the court expecting to be laughed at, but instead I was crowned. It taught me that truth always wins.

Q2: Were you tempted to replace the seed?

A2: Yes, I was. When nothing grew, I felt desperate. But my parents taught me that honesty matters more than winning, so I resisted the temptation.

Q3: What is the most important quality for a good king?

A3: Honesty, without a doubt. If people cannot trust their king, nothing else matters — not wealth, not power, not intelligence.

Q4: What advice would you give to children today?

A4: Always tell the truth, even when it is hard. It might seem scary at first, like carrying an empty pot to an Emperor, but honesty always leads to good outcomes.

Q5: Do you still love gardening?

A5: Of course! I have planted the most beautiful garden in the palace. But now I also use gardening to teach patience and honesty to the children of my kingdom.

Question 49

- Question ID: CH01-LA-049
- Type: Long Answer
- Difficulty: Hard
- Bloom Level: Analyzing
- Topic: Conflict Analysis
- Marks: 5

Question: What are the different types of conflict in the story? Explain each with examples.

- Answer Key: The story "Empty Pot" contains several types of conflict:

1. Person vs. Nature: Ping's main struggle is with the seed that will not grow. Despite all his gardening skills and effort, nature will not cooperate because the seed is dead (boiled). This is a conflict he cannot win through effort alone.

2. Person vs. Self (Internal Conflict): Ping faces an internal struggle — should he go to the Emperor with his empty pot or stay home? He battles his fear, embarrassment, and shame. This is the most important conflict in the story because his decision defines his character.

3. Person vs. Society: Ping is the only honest child in a group of cheaters. He stands alone against the crowd, which takes immense courage. Society (other children and parents) chose dishonesty, but Ping chose truth.

4. Honesty vs. Dishonesty (Moral Conflict): The entire story is built on the conflict between truth and lies. The Emperor's test forces every character to choose a side.

Each conflict adds depth to the story and makes Ping's final victory more meaningful.

Question: Why do you think "Empty Pot" is included in your textbook? What do the authors want you to learn from this story?

- Answer Key: "Empty Pot" is included in the textbook for several important reasons. First, it teaches the fundamental value of honesty in a way that is engaging and memorable for young students. Instead of simply telling students "be honest," the story shows them through Ping's experience why honesty matters. Second, the story teaches courage — that doing the right thing often requires bravery, especially when everyone around you is doing the wrong thing. Third, it teaches children about the importance of good parenting — Ping's parents set a positive example while the other parents set a negative one. Fourth, the story connects to real-life situations that students face daily — the temptation to cheat in exams, lie to avoid trouble, or copy others' work. Fifth, the story introduces important vocabulary and comprehension skills appropriate for Class IV students. The authors want students to understand that character is more important than achievement, that honesty builds trust and earns respect, and that the truth may be difficult but is always the right choice.

- Type: Extract Based
- Difficulty: Medium
- Bloom Level: Understanding
- Topic: Inference
- Marks: 3

Question: Why did the Emperor choose to select from "amongst the children"?

- Answer Key: The Emperor chose children because he wanted someone young who could learn and grow into a good king. He also wanted to test their character from a young age, before they became set in their ways.

Extract Set 9 (Q33–Q36)

Read the extract and answer the questions:

"On the announced date many people brought their children with them to the Royal Court. Every child was given a seed and asked to come back after six months."

Question 36

- Question ID: CH01-EXT-036
- Type: Extract Based
- Difficulty: Hard
- Bloom Level: Analyzing
- Topic: Emperor's Intention
- Marks: 3

Question: Why did the Emperor choose a growing task and not a written test or a physical challenge?

- Answer Key: The Emperor chose a growing task because it tested patience (waiting 6 months), honesty (whether they would cheat), and character (how they dealt with failure). A written test or physical challenge would only test knowledge or strength, not the honesty that the Emperor truly valued.

Extract Set 10 (Q37–Q40)

Read the extract and answer the questions:

"He decided to go back and return the royal seed. When he reached the Royal court, he was disheartened to see that every other child had a beautiful flowering plant in his pot. He quietly took his place in the queue. Soon, the emperor came and started inspecting every pot."

- Answer Key: Ping's parents told him to be brave and honest.

Question 46

- Question ID: CH01-EXT-046
- Type: Extract Based
- Difficulty: Medium
- Bloom Level: Understanding
- Topic: Parents' Belief
- Marks: 3

Question: According to Ping's parents, what truly matters?

- Answer Key: According to Ping's parents, working hard and trying one's best is what truly matters — not just the result.

Question 47

- Question ID: CH01-EXT-047
- Type: Extract Based
- Difficulty: Medium
- Bloom Level: Understanding
- Topic: Effect of Advice
- Marks: 3

Question: How did his parents' advice affect Ping's decision?

- Answer Key: His parents' advice gave Ping the courage to go back to the Emperor. Without their encouragement, he might have stayed home out of fear and shame.

Question 48

- Question ID: CH01-EXT-048
- Type: Extract Based
- Difficulty: Hard
- Bloom Level: Evaluating
- Topic: Role of Parents

- Marks: 3

Question: What kind of parents do you think Ping had? Support your answer from the extract.

- Answer Key: Ping had wise and caring parents who taught good values. They encouraged bravery and honesty instead of dishonesty. They focused on the process (hard work) rather than the result (growing a plant). This shows they were thoughtful, supportive, and morally strong parents.

Extract Set 13 (Q49–Q50)

Read the extract and answer the questions:

"The Emperor of the land, where Ping lived, had no children of his own. As he had grown very old, he was worried about the fate of the kingdom. He wanted to find a worthy successor of the crown. After thinking for a long time, he came up with a plan."

Question 49

- Topic: Vocabulary
- Marks: 3

Question: Find a word in the extract that means 'a person who takes over a position after someone.' What word could replace 'fate' in this extract?

- Answer Key: The word is successor (a person who takes over a position). The word 'fate' could be replaced with 'future' or 'destiny.'

Question 50

- Question ID: CH01-EXT-050
- Type: Extract Based
- Difficulty: Hard
- Bloom Level: Analyzing
- Topic: Emperor's Thinking
- Marks: 3

Question: The Emperor "came up with a plan" after "thinking for a long time." What does this tell us about the kind of ruler he was?

- Answer Key: This tells us the Emperor was thoughtful, patient, and wise. He did not make hasty decisions. He took his time to think of a clever plan (the boiled seeds test) rather than choosing a successor randomly. This careful approach shows he was a responsible ruler who cared deeply about making the right choice for his kingdom's future.
